

Practices of Historical Research

Continuity and Change during the 18th and 19th Centuries

July 2–4, 2015

Andreas Erb (Dessau): Petitioner, Servant, Claimant: Using the Archive and Historiography in Anhalt from Late Enlightenment to 1848

Alexander Denzler (Eichstätt): Johann Stephan Pütter (1725-1807) and the Archive-Supported Everyday Work of Lawyers

Wilfried Nippel (Berlin): Johann Gustav Droysen and His Historical Study of Records

Stefan Berger (Bochum): The Future of National Histories

Ulrich Päßler (Berlin): Aspirations and Realities of Historical Research in Archives: J. D. E. Preuß and the Edition of the Oeuvre of Frederick the Great

Michael Riordan (Oxford): The Editing and Publishing of Records in Eighteenth- and Nineteenth-Century England

Marco Tomaszewski (Freiburg): The Town of the Fathers. Urban Historical Research in Basel Before and After 1800

Maria Pia Donato (Paris): Classification and the Use of Documents in the Archives de l'Empire

Jörg Bölling (Göttingen): Different Institutes. The Use of the Göttingen Apparatus Diplomaticus by Christoph Gatterer and Georg Waitz, 1759–1876

Anthony Grafton (Princeton): Premature Archivalism in Early Modern Europe

Wolfgang Burgdorf (Jena): Transformations of Knowledge: From Modern Imperial Constitutional Law to Medieval Imperial and Local History

Oliver B. Hemmerle (Grenoble): Approaching the "Sattelzeit" during the 19th century: The Origins of Historical Research on the Napoleonic Era and Its Archival Sources

David Laven (Nottingham): Venetian Archives and Historiography

Organized by Markus Friedrich (Hamburg) and Philipp Müller (Göttingen)

August Rieper: Der Archivar, 1900. Image: Boris Wilnitsky Fine Arts.