

List of Figures and Tables
Ad Limen

Chapter 1 The “Century of Psychology”

Psychology as a “discipline”

A long past but a short history?

Chapter 2 “Psychology” in the Sixteenth Century: A Project in the Making?

The function of the neologism “psychology”

Aristotelianism and Galenism

Psychologia and the scientia de anima

Rudolph Goclenius’s Psychologia

Chapter 3 From the Science of the Living Being to the Science of the Human Mind

Psychology as the generic science of the living being

Psychologia and empsychologia

On whether de anima books can themselves constitute a science

From soul-form to soul-mind

Psychology as a metaphysics of the rational soul

The new psychology: Christian Wolff

Chapter 4 Psychology in the Age of Enlightenment

Psychology, anthropology and the human sciences

A Republic of Letters

Methodological discussions in Enlightenment psychology

“The best way to perfect this fine Science”

Chapter 5 Historicizing Psychology

Inventing a bibliographic tradition

Constructing a history for psychology

“Psychologiae historico-criticae speciminae”

The history of the “theory of ideas”

Philosophers write the history of psychology

Chapter 6 Psychology and the History of Humankind

Friedrich August Carus and the “history of humanity”

The primitives and the ancients

Toward a total history of psychology

The psychology of the Hebrews

Homeric psychology

Chapter 7 Anthropology’s Place in the Encyclopedias

Enlightenment encyclopedias

The Syntax of the Encyclopédies

The Paris and Yverdon Encyclopédies

The “Systèmes figurés”

Anthropology in the text

The anthropological transformation of morals

Chapter 8 Human Perfectibility and the Primacy of Psychology

Psychology in the Paris Encyclopédie

Psychology in the Yverdon Encyclopédie

The fields claimed for psychology

Metaphysics

Logic

Morals

The psycho-anthropology of perfectibility

The union and interaction of the soul and the body

Chapter 9 Psychology, the Body and Personal Identity

The soul, the body and the “completeness of the nerve”

Psycho-theology and “modern identity”

The body in resurrection

The loss of the body

The seed and the brain

The emergence of the cerebral subject

Appendix I The Two Editions of Goclenius’s Psychologia

Appendix II ANTHROPOLOGIE and PSYCHOLOGIE in the Paris and Yverdon

Encyclopédies

Appendix III Articles from the Yverdon Encyclopédie Belonging to Psychology and Their Place in the Paris Encyclopédie

Bibliography

Index