

Table of Contents

Foreword Eberhard Umbach

1. The German Physical Society under National Socialism in context / Mark Walker
2. Boundaries and authority in the physics community in the Third Reich / Richard H. Beyler
3. Marginalization and expulsion of physicists under National Socialism: what was the German Physical Society's role? / Stefan L. Wolff
4. The German Physical Society and Aryan physics / Michael Eckert
5. The Ramsauer era and self-mobilization of the German Physical Society / Dieter Hoffmann
6. The Planck medal Richard H. Beyler, / Michael Eckert and Dieter Hoffmann
7. The German Physical Society and research / Gerhard Simonsohn
8. The German Mathematicians Association during the Third Reich: professional policy within the web of National Socialist ideology / Volker Remmert
9. 'To the Duce, the Tenno, and our Führer: a threefold Seig Heil': The German Chemical Society and the Association of German Chemists during the Nazi era / Ute Deichmann
10. Distrust, bitterness, and sentimentality: on the mentality of German physicists in the immediate postwar period / Klaus Hentschel
11. Cleanliness among our circle of colleagues: the German Physical Society's policy toward its past / Gerhard Rammer